Affiliate Marketing And How To Promote Cant-make-a-sale.com Doing It

Cant-make-a-sale.com has a very unparalleled type of opportunity that's fun and easy for anyone to start earning some extra money and promote any other product or program that they wish while doing it. Now, the #1 question that I see people want answered is do they pay.

Cant-make-a-sale.com pays people to join with them in their attempt to build their email list. They do ask that members strictly use the advertising methods that they approve. When I first began working with them they permitted partners to advertise in any way they pleased. This approach became a problem due to autoficialy generated clicks and the fact that they pay on a per click basis.

With the new partnership program they provide members with a list of acceptable advertising methods that they find to be the most productive for their goals, this method gives them a little more control than the previous strategy allowed.

In terms of being compensated or not, there's only one reason that CMAS would not pay their affiliate marketing team and that reason is violating their marketing rules such as using auto-surf programs to market their pages. This is the largest problem for any network that pays it's being that there is no real quality to these type of visitors, they automate the visiting process for the end user so no one sees the site. One can't expect to be compensated for such a lazy style of marketing that has no potential to convert to subscribers.

As they said on their website they have a set of advertising methods that they want members to use, just as Google or any other reputable company has guidelines, so does cant-make-a-sale.com and those guidelines are there to protect their interest in the company as well as your's. No one wants to, or even if they did want to, can pay for useless service's.

Their advice to everyone looking to take advantage of the CMAS membership is to simply follow directions the same way you would on a 9-5, if your boss said he wanted a task completed in a fashion, you would do things the way he/she asked for it to be done' right. The same goes for the cant-make-a-sale.com partnership. It's a very good opportunity, so why ruin a good thing.
