At the end of the day though, success is ultimately up to you. If you start a offline business like a restaurant, it will probably fail (90% of all offline businesses fail). This is just as true with Internet business. Part of the reason is that once you go online, you will be confronted by lots of offers of money making programs which constantly divert your attention and make you change direction. This means nothing gets properly finished and therefore doesn't work. How ever you decide to start making money online – make sure that your stay focused, especially in the early days – so that your efforts are given the proper chance to succeed.br /
