Methods to Get Approved into a Cost Per Action Network

Regularly many conventional affiliate networks like Commission Junction or Share-A-Sale have CPA offers that you can join, but they usually call it by a different name. If you're already a member of an affiliate network, it's often valuable to check if they have any CPA offers available. However, these offers usually don't pay as much or convert as well as offers from dedicated CPA networks.

Because of the somewhat murky past of CPA offers ( unscrupulous marketers would make false claims in order to get folk to submit their info ), modern CPA networks are extraordinarily cautious about who they let in and as a consequence getting accepted in to a CPA network is generally harder than for anormal affiliate network.

It can pay to lay the ground work before applying. You need to make a website around a specific niche, CPA offers can be for anything, but it is recommended that you select a health, beauty, exercise, weight loss, ringtone or discount niche to start with. Use Wordpress as your content management system and write ( or outsource ) between seven and 15 articles related to your niche and post them over a period of time. Make sure you change the theme to something more suitable, either auniversal theme or find one that matches your niche youcan find wordpress themes for virtually each niche today. Make sure that your website is indexed in Google.

Unlike affiliate networks, most CPA firms will essentially call you for what can best be described as an interview to work out if you're the kind of person they need to accept in to their network. They can ask you all about your past experience and as importantly, ask for express ways you intend to plug their CPA offers. If you do not know or are too imprecise, then you could well have your application declined, so be sure you know your stuff before you apply!

Another question that CPA networks will ask you when deciding whether to accept your application is if you've got an email list. If you do not have a list yet, definitely consider putting up an email capture form on your website, try and employ a pro service like Aweber, but if youare n a restricted budget you may find that phpList serves you to start out with.

One methodology that will help you get accepted is if you use your company name rather than your own name. The reason for this is that a person who has their own company is probably going to be more serious about their business than someone that runs CPA offers as part of an additional earnings.

Remember, if you lie on your request or during the interview and make claims like you arealready earning thousands of greenbacks when youare not, they will look at your account and if you have not generated the kind of money you said you might, they may decide to shut your account, so the best way to get accepted in to a CPA network and keep your account is to always tell the truth.
