Your first objective is to find a search engine optimized keyword that you can use in your domain name. To find this, you can use a keyword analyzer. One place to get them is through the search engines. Use a sample keyword into this tool that explains your site. The analyzer tool will display several options for this sample keyword. Choose those keywords from this list that describe more about what your website is about. Your site is better search engine optimized if you use a long tail keyword because there will be fewer webmasters who will choose them.br /

At this time, you can start looking for your definite domain name. A lot of the domain name companies on the Internet will let you know if a particular name is available. In case the domain name you put in is not available for use, you will be given some other alternatives. Put in your keyword first; this will help you make better use of this tool. The keyword may not be available to use as the domain name. Domain names that have the keyword and a . If you do not find this, put some creative thought into it.br /

There are some ideas to use if you get everything else but not the .com ending too. If your keyword is really trendy, another extension can be used. Some such popular examples are .org, .net and even .biz. Consider this if you do not lay more stock with the difference between worldwide or local marketing. For example, it is better to be number 1 in the Austrian Google than number 400 or something in American Google!br /
